

Child Workers in Nepal Concerned Centre (CWIN-Nepal)

Organisational Profile

Introduction

Established in 1987, Child Workers in Nepal Concerned Centre (CWIN-Nepal) is a pioneer child rights organisation in Nepal. CWIN-Nepal is an advocacy organisation for the child's rights with a focus on children living and working under the most difficult circumstances.

CWIN-Nepal addresses all the critical child rights and child protection issues that include child labour exploitation, abandonment and neglect, sexual exploitation, lack of access to quality education and training, lack of access to quality healthcare, including mental healthcare; trafficking and online child abuse. CWIN-Nepal carries out mass awareness on child rights, conducts policy advocacy towards making government institutions more responsive and accountable to Nepal's children for the realisation of their rights and overall development.

CWIN-Nepal builds partnerships with children and their associations, national alliances, international agencies and movements, government agencies and the private sector to bring the issue of child rights into a national agenda. It has a legacy of ensuring children's direct participation in national and international policies and issues concerning their rights including giving inputs to the new constitution of Nepal. CWIN-Nepal has been facilitating the National Adolescent Girls Network which has members from all the seven provinces of Nepal. Likewise, CWIN empowers and mobilises adolescents and young people to become Peer Educators, Facilitators or Social Mobilisers for peer support. During the Covid-19 Pandemic, it has oriented young people on online safety and mobilised 1500 adolescents on the online platform to provide emotional and psycho-social support, who have successfully reached out to 70,000 young people around the country.

CWIN has been also undertaking a number of child development and protection services including the Child Helplines, transit centres, self-reliance and empowerment of children. CWIN has championed child and adolescent psychiatry and mental health issue in Nepal by initiating the first Child and Adolescent psychiatry OPD at the Kanti Children's Hospital in 2015. CWIN has in its team Nepal's only three Child Psychiatrists, Psychiatrists who are doing their PhD on child Psychiatry, Clinical Psychologists and Counsellors and has proudly reached out to more than 200,000 children and adolescents through the OPD service, online consultation support, first child mental health toll-free number and child mental health outreach camps. CWIN has now constructed a separate facility for Child Psychiatry and Mental health and will be starting Nepal's first in-patient service for children. After the Covid-19 pandemic, CWIN has been able to reach out to 170,000 children and their families with emergency good support, medical support, hygiene kits for adolescents and mental health support. Furthermore, CWIN also ventured into uncharted territory by undertaking reconstruction work necessitated by the devastating earthquake of 2015; most notably, the construction of 20 schools in Dolakha.

CWIN has carried out and published research on various children's issues including child labour, children in armed conflict, sexual exploitation of children, child mental health and online sexual abuse and exploitation, etc. CWIN has a track record of successful evidence-based advocacy on various child rights issues including the educational rights of children. It has extensive experience of working directly with schools for uplifting school performances, good governance, promoting schools as zones of peace and public ownership in school management and school reconstruction. It has been continually providing technical expertise to various agencies of the Government of Nepal (GoN) to formulate policies and directives such as National Plan of Action for Holistic Development of Children and Adolescent Girls, 2013; National Policy on Adolescents Development and Regulations for the Government Declaration of Schools as Zones of Peace. It has also been providing technical support to the GoN to formulate and implement various policies and programs to promote public education, child mental health, child participation etc. It has helped to establish a national child protection mechanism such as the Child Helpline Nepal 1098. Furthermore, it has conducted and published hundreds of researches and studies on the different thematic areas. CWIN has initiated the National Campaign for Education and many other CSO networks. CWIN's existing dynamic working relations with policymakers, local authorities, government agencies and civil society organisations (CSOs) will further enhance the capacities of target groups and final beneficiaries of the Action. CWIN's experience of advocacy and alliance building at the international level including participation in the UNGASS on Children/Drug/SDG Forum, Alliance 8.7; civil society engagement in Universal Periodical Reporting (UPR), CEDAW, Beijing Platform for Action will provide an international perspective to the Action for its successful completion.

With a transformed federal system, CWIN has established its presence in all the seven provinces of Nepal through the Child Helpline Nepal 1098, which is the single comprehensive child protection mechanism in Nepal, which it runs in collaboration with the Ministry of Women, Children and Senior Citizens and the Nepal Telecom Authority. It runs direct interventions for minimisation of all forms of abuse and exploitation, sexual exploitation including online harms, reducing child labour exploitation, socialisation and empowerment of street-connected children and other children in distress. CWIN also runs CWIN Balika Peace Home and CWIN Boy's Transit Home for emergency transit shelter, empowerment and sustainable social reintegration of children at risk.

It has fostered trust and a dynamic relation with both federal and provincial governments, CSOs and their networks and is also the founder and members of many networks on child rights and child protection such as the National Campaign for Education (NCE), Children as Zones of Peace and Protection (CZOPP), Alliance Against Trafficking in Women and Children (AATWIN), Consortium of Organisations Working with Child Participation, NAOSC and Men Engage Alliance. CWIN is also a member of a wide range of international initiatives and networks such as ECPAT International, Global March, Global Alcohol Policy Alliance (GAPC), WFAD (World Federation Against Drugs), Global Campaign for Education (GCE), CRC-Asia, Child Helpline International.

CWIN-Nepal is leading the national alcohol policy in Nepal and is a national coordinator for Nepal Alcohol Policy Advocacy (NAPA). CWIN-Nepal has integrated alcohol, tobacco and drugs as a development issue in its programmes of action in the communities and its direct work with children and young people.

Every year, CWIN-Nepal reaches out to at least 100,000 children and young people through various projects and interventions. It provides direct support to 20,000 children from vulnerable situations for their protection, mental health support, legal support, education support, vocational training and family reunion and social reintegration.

Vision

Our vision is to build a just, prosperous and inclusive society where all children enjoy the fundamental human rights and where the state takes full responsibility to respect, protect and fulfill these rights.

Mission

Our mission is to translate the constitutional spirit of the Federal Democratic Republic of Nepal into rights, dignity, empowerment and protection for the children of Nepal, in partnership with children, and through wider engagement with civil society, private actors and state agencies.

Values

CWIN has built its structures and systems, its policies and procedures, and its training and accountability for staff and partners using a framework of core values. These include Integrity in our theory and practice of securing child rights, and Consistency in securing the safety and Best Interests of Children. Our Creativity in seeking out viable solutions is based on our sense of Responsibility towards the individual child as well as to society at large, and this may involve Risk-Taking and Innovation as necessary. Teamwork within the organisation and Partnership without serve to strengthen our work. We Respect our constituency, our work and our partners, and have earned the reputation of being Trustworthy in all quarters. We work with and towards Non-Discrimination, Non-Violence and Inclusivity, and endeavour to practice Transparency for Good Governance.

How We Champion the Cause: Key Guiding Principles

Keeping the best interests of children at the heart of all its work, CWIN also focuses on making child rights a priority for all development work in the country. Most recently, CWIN worked to ensure that commitments to child rights were included in the election manifestos of all parties contesting in the local government elections held after a 20-year hiatus in the country.

CWIN regularly consults with children from different backgrounds in setting priorities; for instance, it consulted with children affected by the earthquake to design interventions for child protection during emergencies and delivered letters written by 12000 children to the 601 Constituent Assembly members requesting the inclusion of child rights in the new constitution of Nepal.

We build partnerships, alliances and networks with a wide range of actors. CWIN is taking the lead to establish the first Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Department in Nepal at Kanti Hospital, Kathmandu in partnership with the government, FORUT and the Norwegian Psychiatric Association. Another example is our work with the Federation of Kishori Samuhas (Adolescent Girls' Groups) which occurs in partnership with adolescent girls' organisations throughout the country.

We work to strengthen the Child Rights movement within and outside the country. We contribute regularly to all policy documents that affect children's lives, and contribute to national and international networks and alliances such as Children are Zones of Peace (CZOP) National Campaign, National Campaign for Education, Consortium of Organisations Working with Child Clubs; Global March, ECPAT International, Child Helpline International, Girls Not Brides, Aflatoun, etc.

We design our interventions so that communities and rights holders are empowered for sustained child rights work. We acknowledge that enduring change occurs when individuals and communities change, and work collaboratively to achieve this.

Our Goal and Our Strategies

The overall goal of CWIN as an organisation is to ensure that the rights of all children are protected and realised through evidence-based advocacy, research and programme interventions.

The major strategies we employ to achieve this broad goal are clarified here.

- We work towards protection of children from all kinds of abuse and exploitation and seek to improve access to and quality of services for all children by strengthening structures and mechanisms for child protection.
- We promote the participation of children, young people and communities in transforming our society in order to secure uphold and protect rights, by strengthening their capacities and resources.
- We try to enrich the understanding of children's issues and their rights through research and the generation of appropriate data and evidence.
- We support the monitoring of local and national policies and plans, and the increase of the influence of children in development issues that affect their lives, to ensure that children's best interests are served, by providing access to information, strengthening their skills to analyse and debate relevant matters that affect their well-being, and creating fora for children's participation.
- We promote inclusion of children's rights within broader social movements and development processes in the country through strengthened networking and expressions of solidarity as appropriate.
- We encourage commitment towards children's rights among duty bearers, communities and the state through various forms of awareness generation, including mass media.

Specific Objectives over the three-year period

As the country undergoes a major political and administrative restructuring, CWIN will have to undergo a corresponding internal reorganisation in order to retain its level of influence and efficacy at different tiers of the new structure. As more decisions get made at provincial rather than national levels, CWIN's current role as a national NGO must be supplemented by a presence and capacity to advocate at the provincial capitals. Consequently, this period will be one in which CWIN has to have two sets of specific objectives, one internal and organisational, and the second, external and programmatic.

Specific programmatic objectives:

1. In this programme period, CWIN will carry out Advocacy through Action to bring progressive policies and laws related to children, matching the spirit of the new Constitution of Nepal, and encourage commitment towards children's rights among duty bearers, communities and the state, and in particular, by 2020:
 - i. lobby for the endorsement of child friendly local governance and establishment of Child Protection Committees in all provinces at the earliest, providing capacity building support to the provincial governments as required.
 - ii. lobby so that the necessary amendments to the existing Children's Act to ensure Child Rights and Protection are introduced for discussion at the earliest in the new federal lawmaking body (equivalent to the Parliament), and passed, to ensure alignment with the protections in the new Constitution.
 - iii. lobby for endorsement of the National Alcohol Policy by the new federal lawmaking body (equivalent to the Parliament) by converting it into a National Act at the earliest.
 - iv. promote the National School Child Protection Policy for increased acceptance and compliance in all provinces. CWIN will work towards ensuring that 10 percent of the schools in 10 districts where CWIN is working endorse and implement the policy by 2020.
 - v. advocate for inclusion of children's issues in the policies and development plans including in the national and provincial planning documents
2. CWIN will strengthen Child Helpline Nepal 1098 in the six provinces where it currently functions as implementing organisation, and establish a new Child Helpline unit in the seventh province [province no. 2] to directly support 9000 children in need of care and protection of children in need, work for gatekeeping to avoid institutionalisation of children over a three year period, and educate and create 350,000 adult advocates and allies among the general public during this period..
3. CWIN will strengthen capacities and partnerships with our constituencies - children, adolescent girls and young people - for increasing their influence at policy and programmatic levels for protection of children from all forms of violence including commercial sexual exploitation, child marriage, trafficking and child labour exploitation. Ministries, government departments, local governments and/or Child Protection Committees will invite child representatives for consultations at least 5 times a year or 15 times over the three-year period.
4. CWIN will generate public awareness and enrich understanding of children's issues and their rights through media and communications (Bal Sarokar TV and Bal Chautari Radio and Bal Sarokar Online Magazine by developing 10 new programmes, tracking TRPs and site visit data to understand reach. CWIN will ensure that its Digital Resource Centre expands its reach so that content is available for use to the general public by 2020.
5. CWIN will carry out seven baseline studies and three action-research studies by 2020, including a new situation analysis of children at risk in the urban areas of the Kathmandu valley, and a qualitative study of the coping strategies of street children and youth in the context of the new guidelines for working with street children introduced by the Central Child Welfare Board to understand the impact of these guidelines on the relevant constituencies.

6. CWIN will promote inclusion of children's rights within broader social movements and development processes at national and international levels through strengthened networking and expressions of solidarity, in particular, through actions such as increasing opportunities for interaction between the Kishori Samuhas and the Women's movement, providing capacity building support to the travel and tourism industry, minimising child marriage in working districts and reach inputs from ECPAT International to children's organisations on new threats in trafficking and online commercial sexual exploitation.
7. CWIN will strengthen CWIN Balika programme and establish a residential Self-Reliance Centre for girls and young women to provide opportunities for them to learn vocational training for self-reliance by 2020
8. CWIN will work towards strengthening capacities of the government schools in the Kathmandu Valley and provide educational support to at least 20,000 children in need in the urban poor areas and in rural areas by 2020.
9. CWIN will continue its presence in the community through the Women and Children Empowerment and Livelihood Programme (WOCELIP) in partnership with Rural Development Tuki Association for community conscientisation and empowerment of the women and the community for dignified livelihood in Dolakha district by reaching out to 7400 households in 8 VDCs in the northern belt.
10. CWIN will strengthen child mental health services in Nepal through completing the building for the first Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Unit in Kanti Children's Hospital by 2018 and facilitating support services to ensure a full-fledged in-patient service by 2020.

Way ahead

CWIN is committed to taking forward the child rights movement through greater prescriptions of empowerment and guaranteeing children's participation. Through its advocacy work it will continue to influence mainstream development programmes to be inclusive of children, to foster democracy with children. It will continue to influence political parties, government, policy makers and other concerned stakeholders to act upon their promises to ensure rights of every child in the country. It will also advocate for the rights of children stipulated in the new constitution of Nepal. CWIN will work intensively with the newly elected local governments and the new provincial structures to bring child rights as an important agenda for national development. CWIN will continue to fight against child abuse and exploitation to ensure the rights of children at risk. CWIN will also continue its partnership with the government, civil society, private sector and the children to take forward child rights movement in Nepal to a new height.
